composer, and clicking on the map to open it. You can also click J and K on the keyboard to select the card above or below the current card. They do the same thing as up and down arrows. Click the enter with the map chosen to open it. You can also click n by hovering over any card to open the composer's card directly below the chosen card. As always, you can hit the escape to close and cancel any edited fields, popover menus, or dialog windows that are open. Here's the full list of shortcuts. And if you have a question while you are on your board, just click ? to bring shortcuts for quick links: Creating multiple cards and a checklist of items in one click adding multiple cards or a checklist of items can be a pain. If you come from a spreadsheet or Word document with a list of items, there are challenging songs and dances you should do to turn them into Trello cards. Choose text, copy, switch apps, insert, type, switch apps, select text, copy... Uh. Well, that's not the problem anymore! If you want to create multiple maps or checklist items at the same time, you can copy a spreadsheet column or list divided by new lines from the word processor, insert into the composer's map, or add a checklist box, and Present. It will create a new card or checkpoint for each line in the list. This won't prevent the quick and easy enter map-making method; it will only work when you see the text. It's a little bit that's where you need it. Trello Checklist Features Turns out people use checklists quite a bit, so there are several ways to make them more flexible. To begin with, you can reorder the checklists. Just click and drag them. You can also drag the checklist items between checklists in case you want to move all items to your colleague Amy's checklist, for example. Checklists appear in the order you created them, not in alphabetical order. If you've crossed a lot of items from the checklist and you no longer need to view them, just click the Hide completed items in your checklist and these items will be removed from view, so you have a clean list of how you solve your problems. Built-in and related maps and boards Once you're a Trello professional, you'll likely have tons of boards, maps and apps that you use on a daily basis. At times, it can be difficult to track them all. We've broken the board barrier so you can insert Trello cards and boards into your favorite apps such as Bitbucket, Dropbox Paper, appear.in, Confluence Cloud and more. By embedding Trello maps and boards into apps that you use to plan, work, and communicate, teams can stay connected and see who is doing what (and what needs to be done) without switching apps. You can manage multichannel and card projects by adding Trello boards and cards as attachments to the cards. It's very simple - online or desktop, click the App button on the back of the card, select Trello, and search or enter the URL you want to attach. Trello will also automatically pull in the last five cards and boards you visited to help save some time. Another easy way to attach the appropriate map or board is to copy the URL from the browser window, mouse over the map you would like to attach it and hit Cmd'V. In fact, you can mouse over any card and hit Cmd'C to copy it and then mouse over another card and hit Cmd'V to paste it. On your mobile phone, tap the menu icon for the map or board and select Copy Link. Then open the map where you want to add it, select the attachment icon, and select Attach the copied link.
